FOREWORD

"Time is the most undefinable yet paradoxical of things; the past is gone, the future has not come, and the present becomes the past even while we attempt to define it, and like the flash of the lightning, at once exists and expires."

— Cotton

Time passes so rapidly — so rapidly, in fact, that you will find yourself wanting to stop and hold on to just a second of it. But this cannot be done. The closest you can get to making time stand still is through memories. May this book serve to bring you these memories and, in years to come, transport you back in time to days spent here at Reinhardt — days filled with smiles, tears, long hours of study, and the companionship of friends.

J. Sanford McDonald

DEDICATION

. . . the kindly wisdom of a life lived in depth . . .

. . . the strength of a great faith . . .

. . . the unassuming manner of quiet dignity . . .

. . . the guidance of a religious spirit . . .

For these and many other qualities, and because of the influence he has had on all our lives, this 1963 CHEROKEE PHOENIX, is dedicated to —

— J. SANFORD McDONALD —

THE PAST

The present and the future can never be completely separated from the past, for these early beginnings helped to determine the standards, the policies, and the goals of Reinhardt.

The past is a long record of struggle -----a struggle to get established despite obstacles.....beginning in an abandoned cabinet shop..... a military academy..... an elementary school, high school, college combination.....an established and respected junior college.

This is the past....without it the present could not have been realized.....without it there could be no hope for the future. This is our foundation....our beginning. From this we grew.

THE PRESENT

A look at the present calls for an evaluation of what we are what we have done. Even as we judge those who preceded us, so shall we one day be judged.

There will be some who will condemn the student who didn't quite make it the opportunities overlooked the mistakes we made but all of this, our successes and our failures, are now a part of the past. It cannot be changed, only improved upon.

There will be much to commend us the students who excelled the continued emphasis on faith the changes for the better from the years before.

The present has been ours. The Cherokee Phoenix attempts to survey what we have done with the time entrusted to us. The present goes so rapidly. The pace of a college student's life is such that the present slips quietly into the past before he has even been aware of the fact that it was here.

Much of the present will mould us for the future. The knowledge gained here will become a part of us, but the things we will most remember will be the little things the friends we made the things we did. The little moments of beauty and joy which we have learned to hold onto in the present will help us to learn that all the joy we can know in the future will be based on a sum total of little moments of pleasure and contentment.

Our laughter of the present rang out about a hundred different things the battles in the snow entertainment provided by close friends the "get-acquainted" games we played.

We had our serious moments too The worried discussions about the national crisis the feeling of peace and beauty we derived from the lighted administration building, serving as a beacon of light in our darkness a moment of being alone before beginning another day of work.

This is the present we shared with one another the memories we will forever carry with us.

THE FUTURE

The future is the dreams that lie ahead.....the summation of hopes for tomorrow. Our future and the future of Reinhardt lies in its people..... the people who are becoming now the leaders of our nation.....the ministers of our faith.....our lifelong friends.

The future is in usin our personal goalsin our potential for the future. The Reinhardt that we and generations past have known has been the result of someone's dreamssome thinker's planning. The Reinhardt that generations yet unborn will know will be the result of our dreams and our thinking.

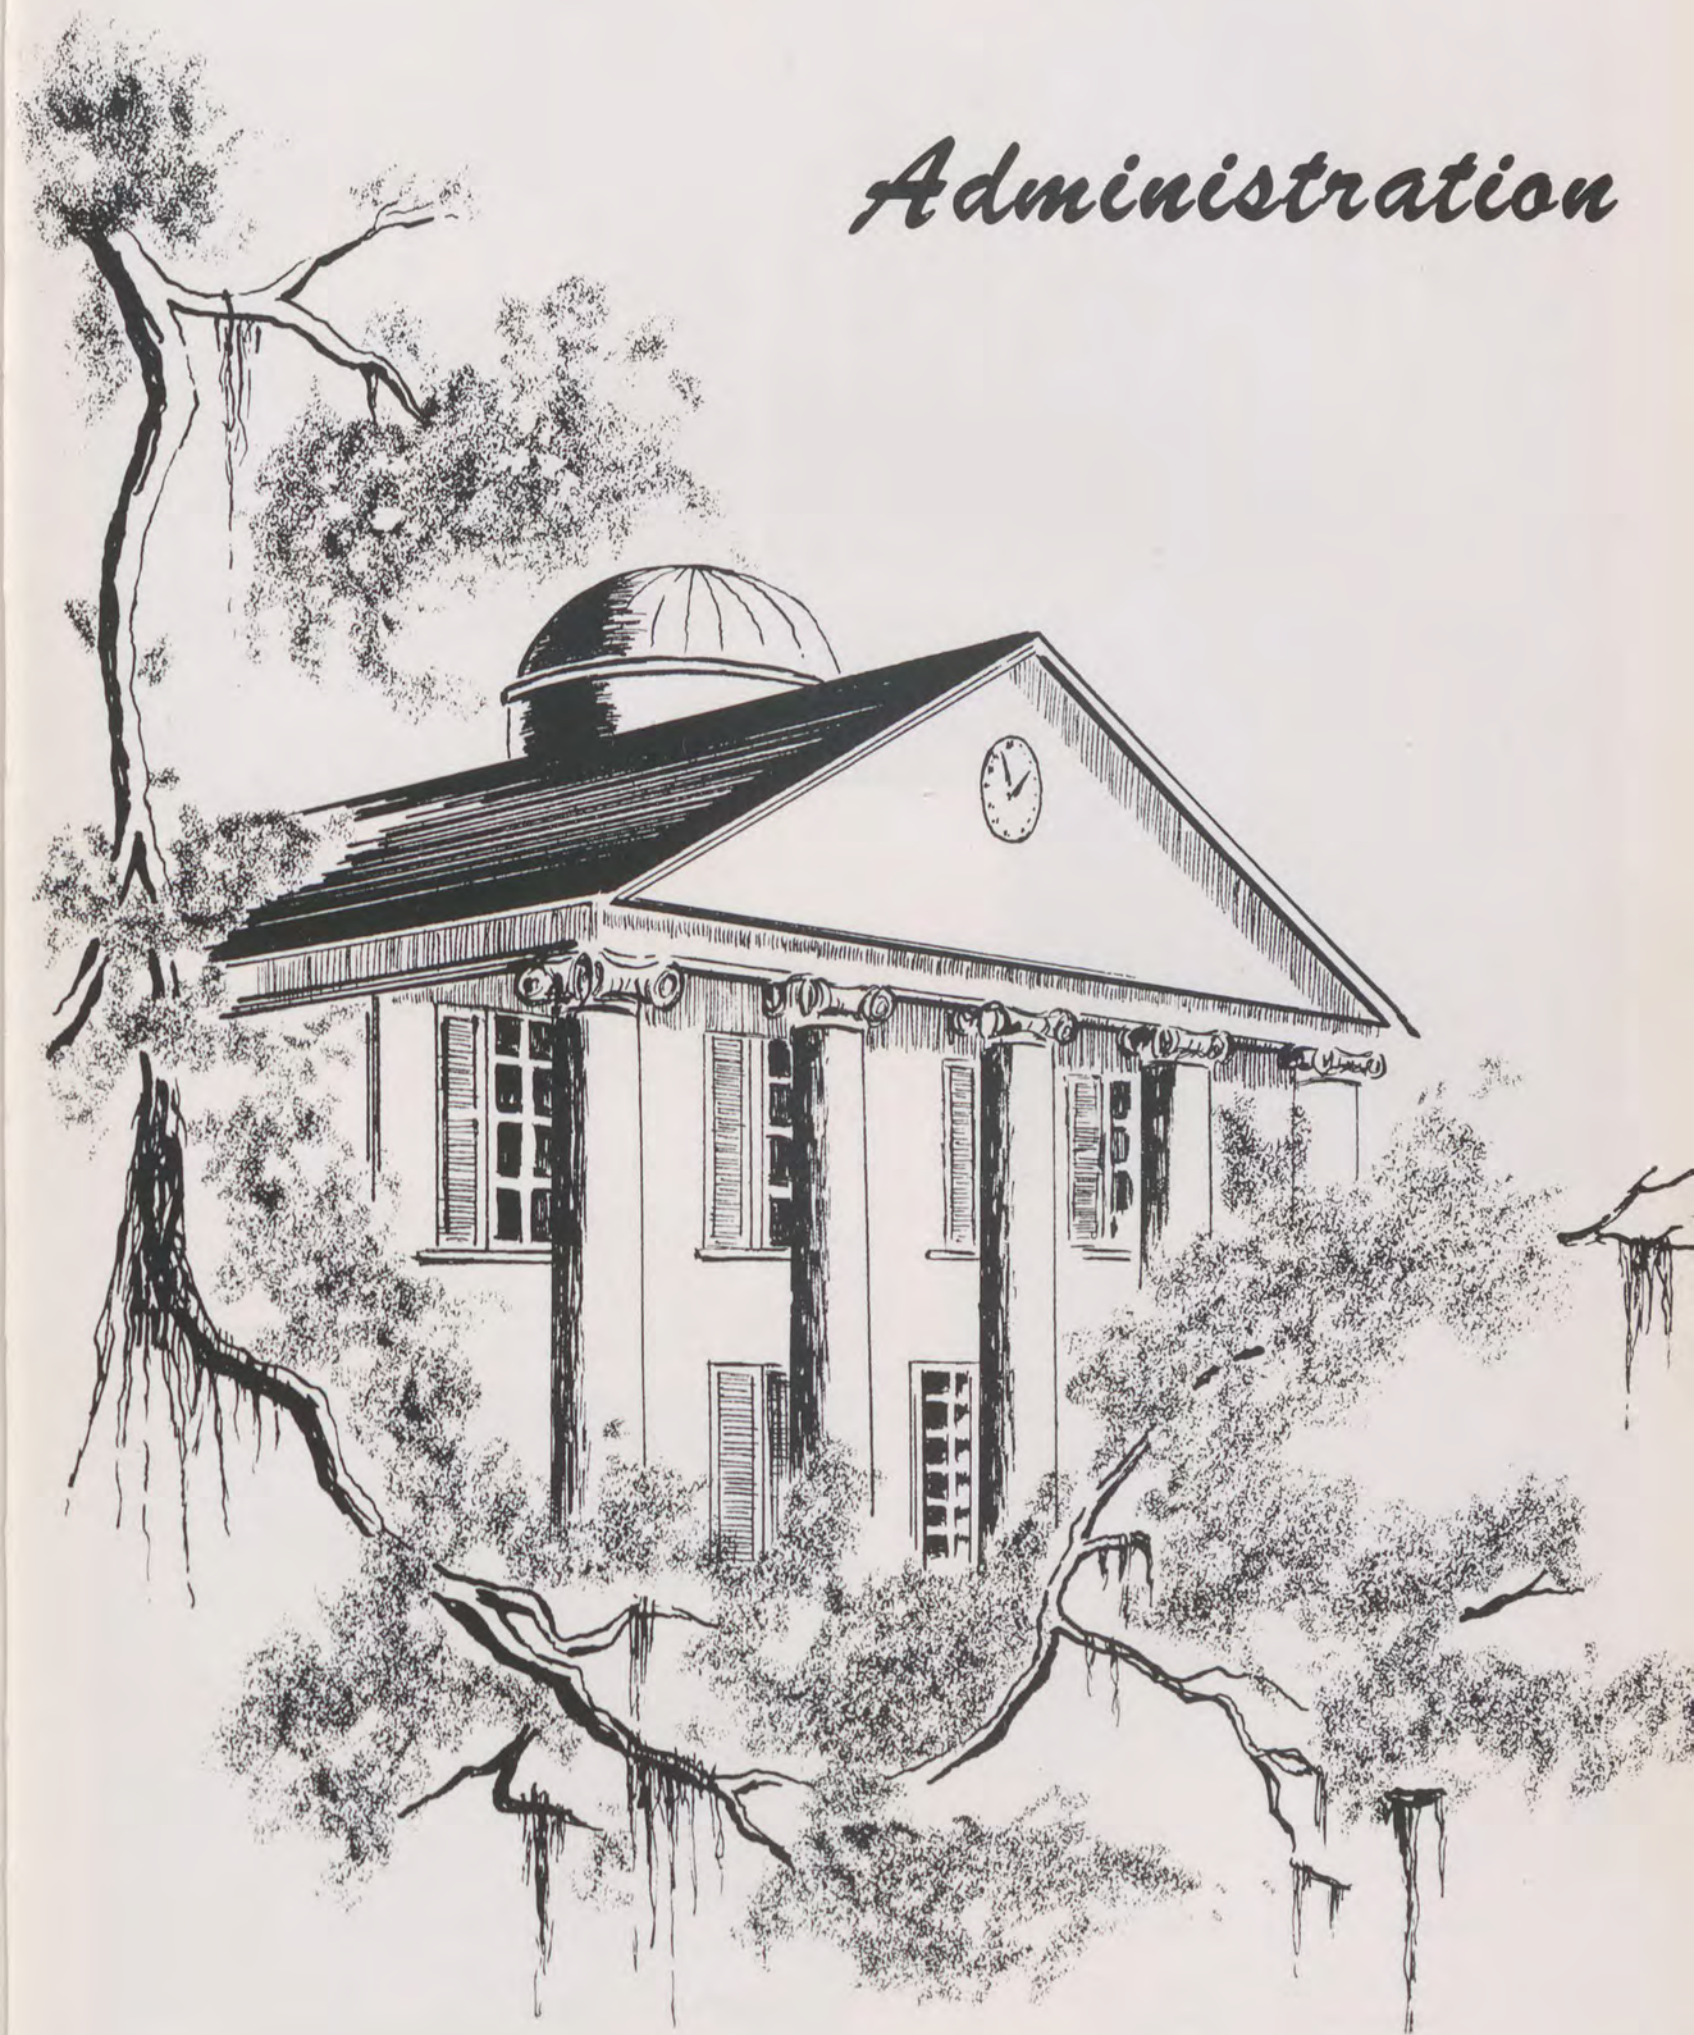

The faculty of Reinhardt is dedicated to the problem of how to best stimulate our intellectual growth. In this role, the faculty serves as a guiding hand. Each of us has in some way a personal contact with these people they are guiding us on to the achievement of our very best.

Administration

J. R. BURGESS, JR.
PRESIDENT

Reinhardt College
Waleska, Georgia

To the Sophomores of 1963:

We live in a world of conflict and change, and our own desires are never certain. Most of all, we want freedom; but we have a compelling desire to conform. Nobody can tell us when to go to bed, but we depend on someone else to wake us up. We don't like rules; but we want the same clothes, the same hairdos, and the same social patterns.

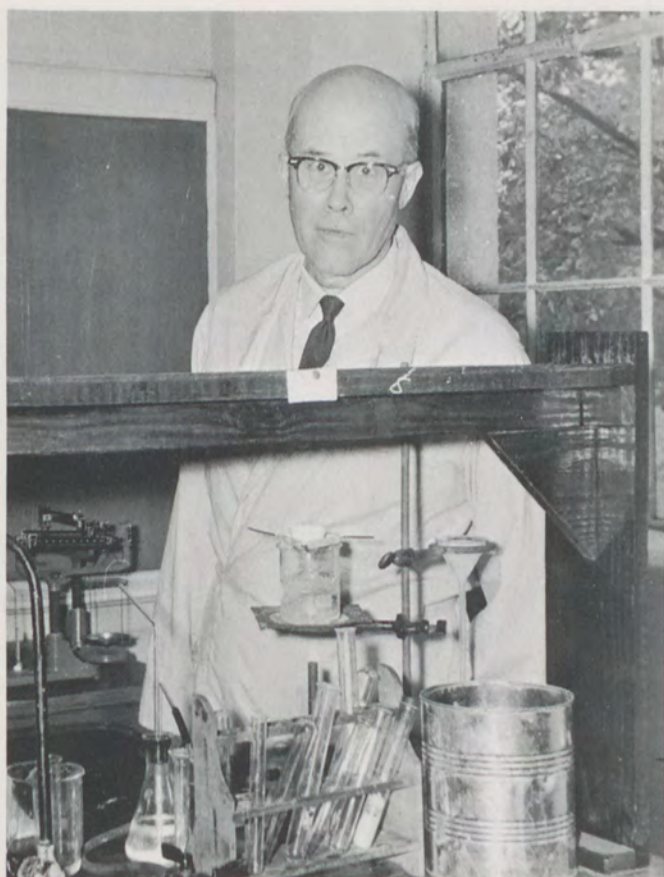

The world has always been in turmoil with one crises following another. The threats are new and more terrible, but man has always had to live with terror at the thought of possible destruction. It was no fun to be eaten by a lion. People are always dissatisfied. They want recognition and constant reassurance that they are appreciated. Some are frustrated and bitter because they can't change everything at once; others because they cannot prevent change.

Our privilege is to live in a world of wondrous beauty and unlimited opportunities. A few are called to be great reformers of evil or great preservers of good, but most of us will find happiness and success by trying to improve the lot of those around us and by striving to leave the world a little better than we found it. Christ gave us the answer when He told us to first love God and then love our fellow man.

For each of you I wish the greatest possible success and happiness.

Sincerely yours,

J. R. Burgess, Jr.
